

Call for Papers

The Oxford Centre for Maritime Archaeology at the University of Oxford will host the 4th Postgraduate Conference in Conflict Archaeology. The three-day conference will bring together promising researchers in this emerging field of the study of human violence and its footprints in the archaeological record.

The archaeology of conflict has been steadily earning its space as a promising sub-discipline of archaeology over the last decade. As this field of study solidifies its legitimacy in academic research, it expands its breadth of knowledge to encompass the numerous facets that constitute the archaeology of conflict.

The conference invites submissions from any period of the past and in all aspects of conflict archaeology, in topics including but not limited to:

- Nautical warfare (coastal, maritime and riverine)
- Battlefield Archaeology
- Siege Archaeology
- Memorialization and Remembrance
- Methodological Approaches to the Study of Conflict
- Technological advancements for warfare in the past
- Thanatourism & Heritage management of Sites of Conflict
- Experimental Archaeology

For further information please contact the conference organizers Brian Fahy and Veronica Walker-Vadillo at conflictarchaeology@gmail.com.

Please send an abstract of between 250-300 words to the organizers by 20th July 2015. Expressions of interest in presenting or attending would be appreciated before this date. Successful candidates will be notified by 14th August 2015.

A1 and A0 posters are also invited. Please send an abstract of 250-300 words to the organizers by 20th July 2015.